

PRESS RELEASE –

1st June 2010

Launch of Pharmacists Advice and Support Service telephone helpline

Today the Pharmacist Advice and Support Service (PASS) telephone helpline goes live.

This new service is provided by one of the leading authorities in this field – PPC (positive people company). This is a totally confidential and independent service providing free professional advice and telephone counseling to all pharmacists and members of their immediate families – 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. The service can provide professional advice and support across a range of significant life events.

Ms Susan Taylor, PASS Manager commented, “The Pharmacists Advice and Support Service are convinced that the introduction of the helpline will be instrumental in enabling pharmacists to successfully manage the challenges we all face in life with the minimum amount of stress and worry.”

Details have been sent to each pharmacist in the most recent Pharmaceutical Society NI mailing and further details can be gained from Society House.
